ROBERT PITCAIRN DEAD IN PITTSBURG.

Widely Known Railroad Man Passes Away at the Close of Day.

HAD BEEN ILL FOR WEEKS

Was The Guiding Hand in the Great Railroad System He Helped To Build—Had Many Local Acquaintances and Was Interested Here.

Robert Pitcairn, one of the best known railroad men in Western Pennsylvania and a director in the Title & Trust Company of Western Pennsylvania, Connellsville, is dead in Pittsburg, having passed away at 5.30 o'clock Sunday evening at his home Ellsworth and Amberson avenue, Shady Side.

At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon he awoke from a short sleep and remarked about the beautiful day, and then again sank into a sleep from which he never awakened. He had been ill for several weeks.

Mr. Pitcairn was born at Johnstone, a village near Paisley, Scotland, on May 6, 1836, thus celebrating his 73rd birthday this year.

Mr. Pitcairn obtained his initial education in one of the little schools of his native village and when 10 years of age was brought to this country by his parents, the latter realizing that there were better chances for their children, of whom there were two other boys, in this land. Mr. Pitcairn again entered school after coming here, receiving in a short time a common school education.

His first regular position was obtained in 1848, when he was 12 years old, going to work in what was then called a "variety" store, the forerunner of the department store of today.

His life-long friend and boyhood companion, Andrew Carnegie, was at that time working in Pittsburg as a messenger boy, and he induced Mr. Pitcairn to give up his place in the store and take a position on the messenger force. This was really the beginning of the life which afterward turned out so brilliantly.

While running about town with messages, Mr. Pitcairn was wide awake and learned to operate a telegraph instrument, as his friend, "Andy" had done. This work was in the interest of the Atlantic & Ohio Telegraph Company. He soon became proficient in the use of the telegraph instrument and was one of the first men of the country to begin reading by sound.

He then went to Steubenville, O., as an assistant operator and telegraph line repairman. He was soon promoted to the post of operator on the Pittsburg & Cleveland line, when the old Ohio & Pennsylvania, now the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago railroad, was started. He was afterward given a place as operator for the Atlantic & Ohio Telegraph Company, for which he was formerly a messenger boy. This was a line running from this city to Philadelphia.

The railroad business always having an attraction for him, Mr. Pitcairn then sought a position with the Pennsylvania and was given the post of operator and assistant ticket agent at Duncansville, Blair county, Pa. This was in July, 1853. Since that time, 56 years ago, Mr. Pitcairn had been a Pennsylvania railroad man and highly honored in every position he ever held. His rise in the service from this position was rapid.

In 1862 Mr. Pitcairn was made superintendent of the Middle division and remained there until 1865, although during the war he had at several times charge of the Pittsburg division in connection with his regular duties. Although he had better chances for promotion in the place of superintendent of transportation he held to the post of division superintendent and managed, in 1865, to secure the appointment of superintendent of the Pittsburg division, a long cherished ambition.

With this newest appointment, he returned to Pittsburg and served the

TWO SHOT IN NECK.

Combination of Beer Bottle and Revolver Makes Hospital Cases.

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 26.—Nick Popovich is said to be dying with a bullet wound through his throat and Tim Stepith is in a serious condition with a bullet in his neck at the hospital here, while a posse headed by Constable Maxwell is hunting for Joe Madz, who is said to have done the shooting.

Madz, it is claimed, left the house where Popovich and Stepith boarded, after a quarrel over a bottle of beer. Returning he called Popovich out of the house and is said to have fired a shot which passed through Popovich's neck and lodged in the neck of Stepith, who was behind him.

FOREIGNER DIES AT THE HOSPITAL

William Schutlie Fell From a Train Near Van Meter and Was Fatally Injured.

While attempting to alight from a moving freight train on the Pittsburg & Lake Erie railroad, near Van Meter, late Wednesday afternoon, William Schutlie, a Hungarian, residing at Van Meter, met with an accident which resulted in his death yesterday morning at 11 o'clock at the Cottage State Hospital, where he was removed following the accident. Schutlie was a blacksmith by trade and was employed at Whitsett. He had completed his day's work and was on his return home from work when the accident occurred. On jumping from the train his head struck a pile of rocks. He sustained a fractured skull and his face was badly bruised.

The body was removed to Funeral Director J. L. Studer's rooms on West Main street and prepared for burial. Funeral services were held this afternoon from his late home at Van Meter. WRIGHT IS FREED ON LARCENY CHARGE

Horses That He Had In His Possession Belonged to Maker of Biggest Flag.

The arrest of James H. Wright, a negro, caused some excitement Saturday afternoon. Following a telephone message from Irwin, Constable J. W. Mitchell apprehended Wright at this place. He was charged with stealing a storm blanket and laprobes from Kunkle's livery stable at Irwin.

Wright said he found the stuff in the buggy when he drove away from Irwin yesterday. He admitted being somewhat drunk and pleaded ignorance that he had stolen the stuff.

Last evening, John Mammo, by whom Wright was employed, came to town and explained the situation. Mr. Mammo said Wright was a cook in his camp up by Roger's Mills. He was sent to Pittsburg to get the rig he was driving. After the matter was explained, Wright was released.

Mr. Mammo is the man who supervised the making of the largest flag in the world, which was unveiled at Pittsburg on the Fourth of July. He and his family are at Roger's Mills because of ill health, and are making out so well they will remain as long as the weather is favorable.

ALLEGED FORGER IS IN TOILS NOW.

Lew Strayer, Wanted in Fayette County, Apprehended in Ohio.

REALIZED ON BOGUS NOTES

Got $1,861 on Three Promissory Notes From the First National Bank of Smithfield—Operated In County About Eight Months Ago.

UNIONTOWN, July 26.—Lew Strayer, an insurance agent and not the newspaper correspondent, was apprehended in Ashland, O., this morning at the instance of District Attorney D. W. Henderson. Strayer is wanted in Fayette county on charges of forgery.

About eight months ago Strayer sold insurance in various sections of Fayette county and made himself pretty well known. While in the vicinity of Smithfield he presented and realized on three notes at the First National Bank of that place.

The first note bore the endorsement of O. P. Markle, the Uniontown real estate dealer, and was for $861. The second was apparently endorsed by J. P. Conn, the Uniontown contractor, and was for $500. The third and last carried S. A. Conn's signature and was for $1,000. Mr Conn lives in Springhill township.

When the notes became due the forgeries were discovered and District Attorney Henderson notified. Warrants for Strayer's arrest were sworn out about 10 days ago and his description sent throughout the three States.

District Attorney Henderson this afternoon received word that Strayer had been apprehended by the Ashland police and he is being held by the Chief at that place pending further instructions.

HEARING TODAY IN NAOMI DISPUTE

Mrs. Moore Claims That Company Did Not Mine Coal in a Proper Manner.

UNIONTOWN, July 26.—Before an imposing array of counsel, the equity hearing of the Naomi Coal Company to restrain Mrs. Elizabeth S. Moore from cancelling the lease held by the company on her property which the plaintiffs are operating, was taken up today with Judge Van Swearingen on the bench. Moorehead & Smith of Greensburg, R. P. Watt of Pittsburg, and Smith & Brownfield of Uniontown represent the plaintiffs while the interests of Mrs. Moore are being looked after by Robbins & Kunkle and Gaither & Whitten of Greensburg and McDonald & Gray of Uniontown.

Mrs. Moore claims negligent mining methods have resulted in such a loss to her that she would cancel the lease of the Naomi company. She claims that where from 90 to 95 per cent of the coal should be mined, the Naomi company is only getting out from 55 to 60 per cent.

Scores of mining experts from all over the bituminous district have been summoned as witnesses and will testify. This morning technical questions regarding the maps of the mine which have been submitted by the Naomi company were gone over and but two witnesses examined. They were F. R. Knight, the engineer who made the maps, and H. B. Moore, the draughtsman.

MAN HELD FOR FOR ASSAULTING GIRL

Testimony That Little Everson Child Was Brutally Taken Advantage Of.

SCOTTDALE, July 26.—Joseph Jones, a young man of about 23 years of age, of Everson, was held for court by Justice John C. Brownfield of East Scottdale, as the result of an alleged attack on Gertrude Hollis, aged between 14 and 15 years on Saturday shortly after 9 o'clock. It was testified that Jones met the little girl as she was going up the Baltimore & Ohio railroad tracks above the Everson station on her way to her home in East Scottdale, and threw her to the ground.

She screamed for help and Frank Yannick, who was on the West Penn viaduct, a short distance above and saw the occurrence, rushed to her aid, but her attacker had fled. The little girl's throat was scratched and her lips had a big bruise where the brute struck her when she made the outcry. Her clothing was torn and covered with ore dust from along the tracks and she was suffering severely from the fright of her awful experience.

Constable Adam Brown arrested Jones as the man accused of the crime at one of the Everson pool rooms. It is said that Jones had on a light suit when Yannick saw him and hurried home and changed his clothes and got back to the pool room. Yannick who knows Jones well identified him positively as the one he saw attacking the little girl. Constable Brown took his prisoner to the Scottdale lockup and he was given a hearing before Squire Brownfield. Jones said that he was with the girl and admitted to the Justice that he kissed her, but denied making the attack described by her or indicated by her clothing and person, and which Yannick said he saw.

An effort was made on the part of Jones' friends to have the matter compromised, but the Justice would hear to nothing of the sort and committed the young man to jail for the court to pass upon the case. Constable Brown took him to Uniontown this morning.

THOUSANDS SEE TROOPS IN CAMP.

Crowds Flock to Somerset From All Western Pennsylvania Points.

BRIGADE REVIEW IS FEATURE

This Is Attraction Second Only to Presence of Governor on Tuesday. Impressive Services Held by Chaplains During the Day.

Special to The Courier.

SOMERSET, July 26.—Yesterday was Somerset's gala day. Thousands upon thousands of visitors flocked into the town on dozens of special trains from all over Western Pennsylvania. The mess tents were taxed to capacity and more than one kinder went empty after the guests had been taken care of.

Connellsville was well represented. Nearly a thousand people came from the center of the coke region, some by train, others by auto. Company D and the Regimental Band were the centers of interest for the coke region visitors.

Twenty thousand interested spectators secured points of vantage about the parade grounds of the Second Brigade National Guard this afternoon, when the brigade review furnished a military spectacle second in point of magnificence to but one other event scheduled for the week, the Governor's review next Tuesday. With his staff Brigade General Willis Hulings watched from a knoll in front of his headquarters every command in the brigade pass in the review. The massed bands occupying a position near the center of the parade grounds, played while the infantry, regiments, cavalry troops, Battery B, signal corps and the regular army detachments detailed to the camp marched by.

Religious services were conducted by each of the regiments. Of special interest were those held by Chaplain George J. Russel of the Eighteenth regiment, who delivered his farewell sermon after six years of service. Chaplain Russel, formerly assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Pittsburg, has accepted a call from the First Church of South Hampton, Mass.

Col. Albert J. Logan gave a brief address, touching upon Chaplain Russel's faithful service and the affection between him and the men.

While all other services were held yesterday, those of the Tenth regiment were conducted by Chaplain Henry W. Temple, professor of history of Washington and Jefferson College, at 7.30 o'clock this evening. He took his text from the second chapter of I. John: "I have written to you, young man, because you are young and strong." He said:

"Religion is not only for aged or infirm, but for the young and strong. Religion for the young and strong must not be pious twaddle."

Chaplain John V. Royer of the Fifth regiment dwelt upon dangers and temptations of camp life and the importance of keeping clean.

Lieutenant George C. Marshall of the regular army this afternoon gave a lecture at the brigade headquarters for field officers on map reading and a demonstration of the war game.

The entire camp has been suffering from a shortage of water the two wells from which the supply is drawn having proved inadequate. The trouble will be rectified tomorrow morning. Gen. Hulings takes the situation philosophically.

"Gen. Grant accomplished pretty good results with his army," he remarked, "and I never heard of him having it piped to his various regiments."

A tactical ride of regimental field officers will be a feature of the camp tomorrow.

WOMEN FLOCK TO SEE THAW GO ON STAND

Most of Them Are Young and Pretty, Too—Jerome Is Early on Hand.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., July 26.—(Special.)—The hearing in Harry K. Thaw's sanity was resumed before Justice Mills today. The court room was crowded, it being expected that Thaw would take the stand today. A big majority of the spectators was women and most of them young and pretty. District Attorney Jerome was early on hand bringing voluminous bundles of documents by which he hopes to defeat the Thaw freedom move.

Attorney Charles Merchauser did not know whether or not Thaw would take the stand today. There are several witnesses besides the experts yet to be heard before Thaw goes on.

STRIKE SITUATION IS GROWING BETTER

McKees Rocks Men Still Out While Butler and New Kensington Work.

United Press Telegram.

PITTSBURG, July 26.—Fearing an attempt would be made today to bring strikebreakers to take the place of 2,000 striking workmen the Pressed Steel Car Company surrounded the plant at 4 o'clock this morning and remained on guard until 9 o'clock. Every train that entered the town was boarded by strikers and the passengers were compelled to give an account of themselves.

This espionage continued for five hours but no strikebreakers were found. Deputy sheriffs on guard at the water plant on the Ohio river fired on an attacking party about 3 o'clock this morning. It is believed a skiff full of strikers landed near the water plant, but the object is unknown. As soon as they were discovered they hurled rocks and other missles at the deputies on guard. This was answered by several shots. One man is reported shot, but no trace of him can be found.

BUTLER, July 26.—The strike of the Standard Steel Car Company ended this morning. When the whistle blew at 7 o'clock more than 2,000 men were inside the plant ready to begin work. The strikers returned without any agreement on adjusting the differences. Seven strike leaders were discharged.

Officials of the company state in the future the preference will be given American workmen. It is said a petition will be sent to Harrisburg asking Butler be made a substation for the State Constabulary as on account of the large foreign population they are unable to cope with the situation.

NEW KENSINGTON, July 26.—Eight mills of the American Sheet & Tin Plate Company in this district are running full today, the first time since July 1, when the employes walked out because of the company's "open shop" order.

So far it is learned a number of strikers are back at the plant working on the same conditions as before they went out. Upper mills known as the Pennsylvania plants are running full. Lower, or Pittsburg plant, is running about three-quarters of its force.

Connellsville Company Extends the Scope of Its Business Here.

JULIUS VIRO IS IN CHARGE

Board of Directors of the Title & Trust Company Decided the Matter at Recent Meeting and New Departure Will Begin Within a Week.

A new departure will be inaugurated as soon as possible by the Title & Trust Company of Western Pennsylvania when, within the next week, a foreign department will be opened in connection with the general banking business of the company.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors it was decided to open a foreign department and preparations were immediately taken looking towards that end. Although the matter was suggested by President L. F. Ruth, it met with unanimous support on the part of the Directors of the institution.

Just now the First National Bank is the only institution having a foreign department and before the First National took up the matter the private banks conducted by foreigners were the only places where the large foreign population of Connellsville and vicinity could transact its business in a satisfactory manner.

Julius Viro will have charge of the Title & Trust Company's foreign department and the necessary changes in the interior arrangement of the bank are being made. The foreign department will have its office in the room formerly occupied as a private office by President L. F. Ruth, Mr. Ruth taking up quarters in the Directors room.

Kills Wife With Tomahawk Found In Old Grave of Indian Warrior.

United Press Telegram.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 26.—Waylaying his beautiful wife in a lonely country road and striking her down with an old tomahawk, Robert E. Fanning of Westport, fled from his home, wrote a startling letter to the chief of the New Bedford police, in which he blessed his dead wife, drove to New Bedford, delivered the letter at the Central Police Station and then in the presence of three police officers, blew out his brains, dying instantly.

The crime was spectacular and wierd. Fanning literally hacked his wife to death with a tomahawk which he had dug from the grave of an old Indian chief near here. The crime was caused by drink.

Five years ago Fanning, a man in moderate circumstances, met Tina Hall, a beautiful daughter of George Hall, the wealthiest man in Westport enjoying an income of $15,000 a year. For two years they lived happily. Then Fanning began drinking and frequent quarrels followed. The birth of a baby girl failed to heal the breach.

Sunday the couple had a violent quarrel and Mrs. Fanning in alarm fled to the home of George Trip, a miller, a half a mile distant. She left Trip's house at 8:30 last night to return home. Fanning waylaid her and beat her to death with the tomahawk, hiding the body in the bushes where it was found today, horribly mangled.

Nigger Hill Negro Uses Shotgun To Teach Fellow African Religion.

Herbert Myers, a Nigger Hill negro, attempted to teach Christianity by means of a shot gun yesterday and the outcome was that Thomas Glenn, also colored, who refused to get Myers' kind of religion, received several pieces of buckshot in that part of his anatomy which will cause him to stand for his meals for a day or two.

Myers made a getaway but Chief of Police Rottler, to whom the affair was reported, landed Glenn and the shot gun which did the damage.

According to Glenn's story, he and Myers had a religious argument, Myers claiming Glenn didn't have the right sort of Christianity. The dispute waxed warm and trouble threatened.

"I'll teach you the right kind of religion," yelled Myers, as he dived in his home.

He reappeared in a second or two and took a pot shot at the retreating figure of Glenn. There was a shot and a yell as the missles touched the tender spots of Glenn's hide. Myers disappeared and the police are looking for him.

Glenn had a handful of shot picked from his hide and was not seriously injured. He is even more anxious to find Myers than are the police.

The Weather.

Showers late tonight and Tuesday; slight change in temperature is the noon weather prediction.

HISTORY HUNTERS HAVE BIG DAY.

Locate Fort Ligonier and Visit Other Interesting Places.

THEY ARE WELL ENTERTAINED

Rev. George P. Donahoe of Connellsville Compares Braddock's Route With That of Forbes—Other Papers Are Read at Meeting.

LIGONIER, July 26.—Members of the Western Pennsylvania Historical Society enjoyed a most delightful day here Saturday. It was the opinion of Dr. W. D. McGowan, late of Ligonier, that a battle was fought on the hill northwest of Idlewild. Photographers were with the company, who snapped up all the pleasant nooks and corners of the park.

The company then proceeded to Ligonier, going directly and immediately to a point just below the place where the old fort was located. The company alighted from the cars and walked up the steep bluff, passed the old cave and then to the location of the fort. Squire I. M. Graham had a large chart at hand, from which John N. Boucher, Esq., of Greensburg, pointed out the location of Fort Ligonier, as exactly as could be obtained from the records of the British war department.

From "Fort Hill" the company walked to the old cemetery adjacent to the Presbyterian Church where rest the remains of Louisa St. Clair Robb, a daughter of General St. Clair. The grave deserves more care and attention than it has received in years gone by.

At 6 o'clock the company, to the number of 150, assembled at the Ligonier Springs Hotel for dinner. The proprietor, Arthur Wintemute, had a splendid layout prepared for the occasion.

In the spacious dining hall speech-making was started. Rev. Geo. P. Donohoe of Connellsville, spoke on "Braddock's Route Compared With That of Forbes." Rev. Kemp of Turtle Creek, spoke on "Arthur St. Clair." Erasmus Wilson of the Gazette-Times, had for his theme the necessity of teaching the school children local history. His remarks were humorous. In response to these addresses I. M. Graham, Dr. McAdoo and Rev. Sumner spoke.

Prominent in the delegation of 129 persons from Pittsburg were Rev. Bishop Whitehead, of the Episcopal Church; Hon. Boyd Crumrine, of Washington, Pa., a noted lawyer and former State law reporter; Postmaster Davis of Pittsburg; Burd Patterson, Esq., secretary of the Historical Society, and a lineal descendant of Capt. James Burd who fought the battle of Loyalhanna and won a victory over 1,400 French and Indians. More than 60 of the British soldiers were killed, wounded and missing in this battle. Mr. and Mrs. Marsh were present. Mrs. Marsh is at present regent of the Pittsburg chapter, D. A. R.; also Colonel and Mrs. Samuel Arman, the latter being a lady prominent in the national society of the D. A. R.

In September the Historical Society will make a pilgrimage to Bushy Run. The chapter at Detroit, Michigan, is named "Louise St. Clair" chapter after General St. Clair's daughter.

CHINKS GIVEN WHITE WOMEN TEACHERS

Requires One To Save Each Soul of a Chinaman Over In Greensburg.

GREENSBURG, Pa., July 26.—A complete disruption of the Sunday school of Chinamen in the First Methodist Episcopal Church of this town was threatened the other day when the council of the church withdrew the young women teachers.

Upon the formation of the class, promoted by Tom Sing, an Americanized celestial, it was decided to place a young man teacher in charge of the pupils, but the Chinamen demurred and refused to attend another session of the class unless and American woman would teach them. They insist also on a teacher for each pupil.

That demand had a tendency to stagger the council, but the Chinamen won out, because it was considered that as the class sessions were held in the Sunday school room and only on Sunday mornings there could be no objection to the plan proposed by the Chinamen.

The class consists of seven or eight Chinamen and each has a private woman tutor.

UNIONTOWN, July 26.—After a lively chase and a battle in the barroom of the Exchange Hotel J. H. Lollar captured Joe Fochuck, a supposed robber.

He then ran inside and for several minutes dodged around the room until he was finally cornered by Lollar, who beat him into submission with a broom.

ROBERT PITCAIRN DEAD.

road for 10 years, at which time the general agency of the road at Pittsburg was added to the position he was then holding.

Mr. Pitcairn's best work was probably done during the Civil War, when he was in his prime and one of the real men of brains connected with the system. By his able management of the company's affairs the division and branches under him kept up an excellent record. For three months after the battle of Antietam he had charge of both the Pittsburg and Middle divisions of the road and for part of that time also was head of the Franklin branch, from Chambersburg to Hagerstown, and handled the movement of trains over the Cumberland Valley railroad.

In 1863, for about the same length of time, and during the battle of Gettysburg, he again had charge of the two big divisions in addition to his duties as superintendent of transportation. It was during the stirring times that Mr. Pitcairn demonstrated to his superior officers that he was able to cope with almost any trying situation which presented itself.

He was vice president and a director of the Westinghouse Airbrake Company. He was also vice president of the Fidelity Title & Trust Company and a director and officer in several banking institutions in Pittsburg.

Mr. Pitcairn is survived by his wife and his son, Robert Pitcairn, Jr., and three daughters, Mrs. Omar Decker, Mrs. V. L. Crabbe, and Mrs. Charles L. Taylor.

Mr. Pitcairn was a close friend of President L. F. Ruth of the Title & Trust Company and Mr. Ruth will attend the funeral in Pittsburg. Mr. Pitcairn was a stockholder in the Title & Trust Company, as well as a member of the Board of Directors.

When seen today Mr. Ruth expressed deep regret over the death of his old friend. The two were intimate friends and was principally through the influence of Mr. Ruth that Mr. Pitcairn became interested in the Title & Trust Company.

MONASTARY TO START.

With 125 Men Old Frick Plant Resumes Tomorrow.

With 125 men employed, the Monastary plant of the H. C. Frick Coke Company, will begin the manufacture of coke tomorrow, the extensive repairs made necessary because of the long continued idleness at the plant having been completed, and the plant having been put in shape for operating. Sufficient orders have been received to keep the plant going steadily for some months to come, and it is believed that the Frick company will not order it shut down again until it is shut down for good, following the removal of all of the coal. This will require several years, it is thought.

Wants, for rent, for sale, etc., cost only one cent a word.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Camden, N.J.— "It is with pleasure that I add my testimonial to your already long list—hoping that it may induce others to avail themselves of this valuable medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered from terrible headaches, pain in my back and right side, was tired and nervous, and so weak I could hardly stand. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored me to health and made me feel like a new person, and it shall always have my praise." —Mrs. W. P. VALENTINE, 902 Lincoln Avenue, Camden, N. J.

Gardiner, Me.— "I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."— Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 89, Gardiner Me.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

STRENUOUS KICK FROM S. BROWNSVILLE

Will Fight Bitterly The Removal of Their Postoffice and Consolidation With Brownsville

There is much opposition to the report made by Postoffice Inspector Williams to the effect that the Brownsville and the South Brownsville offices should be consolidated August 15 In recommending that the offices be consolidated Inspector Williams suggests that South Brownsville be made a substation and that free delivery be extended so far as the streets and the numbering would permit It is claimed that economy would be a great factor in favor of the idea

W C Steele is the present postmaster at Brownsville and W M McAlpine has the office at South Brownsville The business men of South Brownsville claim that it has a registered vote of 900 to Brownsville's 400 They declare that they changed the name of the town from Bridgeport to South Brownsville in an effort to consolidate with Brownsville and the town would not take them in

The people also point to the fact that whereas their postoffice was formerly housed in a poor and inferior building they recently raised $1 000 in less than 30 days and with this secured quarters in a desirable building and in a central location until now they have one of the best equipped offices for a town of its size in the State They also point to the fact that where the business of their post office two or three years ago was only $2 400 a year it is now doing a business for last month amounting to $600

Congressman Cooper will look into the matter and endeavor to straighten out the difficulty

UNIONTOWN July 25—In arresting William Neal a colored man at the request of a number of residents of Askin street late Saturday afternoon Constable Jacob Churns of North Union township, was twice stabbed by Neal and had a narrow escape from death The weapon used was an ordinary pocket knife, the blade of which had been sharpened to a razor edge In wresting the knife from the negro Churns had his left hand badly cut as the blade was drawn across it

Churns wore out a handy billy on the negro's head but it didn't seem to have any effect When the Uniontown police arrived they found that the negro had kicked the officer square in the mouth and was making his escape through a fence

THE SOMERSET ENCAMPMENT.

The National Guard Encampment at Somerset is not a mere picnic of tin soldiers as it has been in times past. There is some relaxation in it to be sure, but there is also a great deal of hard practical work.

Since the Tenth and other Pennsylvania regiments marched forth to real war on almost a moment's call, the value of having a State militia under training for actual military duty has been better appreciated. Gone are the gaudy uniforms that were once the pride of the wearers' hearts and the envy of everybody else; gone are the tinsel and the glory of display; gone is practically all that was spectacular. The arms and uniforms, the training at home and in the annual encampments, are all designed to make service men, men who can march in dust and mud, men who can shoot straight and who know how to obey orders.

The old encampments were little more than dress parades and band contests and flirtations with the admiring ladies. There may be some of these left in modern encampments, but they are the incidentals not the essentials. The Somerset encampment no doubt has many pretty girls for visitors, but it also has some veteran United States Army officers and experts who are there for the purpose of observation and suggestion.

The Somerset Encampment is serving many excellent and useful public purposes, and if the boys and girls can get any fun out of it on the side we feel sure that the patriotic public will not begrudge it to them.

A MUNICIPAL MERGER FOR BROWNSVILLE.

The war between Brownsville and South Brownsville concerning postal facilities will perhaps be settled in the easiest and most satisfactory manner by the consolidation of the two towns.

The war is over here on Mud Island, and we can speak from experience.

Consolidation was objected to in New Haven because the New Haven postmaster thought the Connellsville postmaster would not consult the convenience of the New Haven people. Further objections were made by some of the local politicians of New Haven, who thought they wouldn't have anything to say if New Haven was annexed to Connellsville. They urged that Connellsville had enough votes to fill all the offices and hog the job of government and the usufruct thereof.

Both fears were groundless.

New Haven finds herself with better postal facilities than ever, and her influence in the Town Council and School Board is powerful almost to domination. The President and Treasurer of the School Board are West Side residents, and the best Chairmanships in the Town Council are held by West Siders.

This may not always be so, but it is a fact that since consolidation has been effected ancient geographical jealousies have faded away. People on this side of the river are perfectly willing to be represented in public affairs by good men from any portion of the greater town.

We have a bigger and a better town than we ever had before, and it's growing as the advantages of consolidation are becoming apparent to other contiguous suburban territory.

Not only should the postoffices of Brownsville and South Brownsville be consolidated, but the towns should also be consolidated and the postoffice located in the central portion of the greater town. The Federal Government has pointed the way. The Brownsville people had better get into line promptly.

After a long lethargy, the Brownsville and South Brownsville community has awakened into activity, and it now promises to become an industrial center which will make a big spot on the map. The progressive citizens there should awaken to the fact that the census of 1910 is coming along, and that the interests of the whole people will be wonderfully promoted by being reported in that census as one big town, and not as as two insignificant boroughs which for aught the public will know may be miles apart.

Now is the time to merge.

A CAPTAIN OF INDUSTRY WHO ROSE FROM THE RANKS.

The death of Robert Pitcairn removes a prominent figure from Pittsburg business circles, though not from the management of the great corporation which he ably assisted in promoting and whose fame arose almost wholly therefrom. Several years ago he retired from active service.

Commencing with Andrew Carnegie as a telegraph messenger boy, both entered the railroad service and rose contemporaneously, the canny Andrew being one lap ahead. When he resigned as Superintendent of the Pittsburg Division to begin his career as a master steelmaster, he was succeeded by "Bob" Pitcairn, and Robby stuck to the job and grew up with the company.

"Uncle Robert" as he later became affectionately known to the people of Pittsburg, was one of the Captains of Industry who rose from the ranks, whence they mostly rise, and who maintained his position long enough to carve his name in bold and enduring letters high upon the walls of fame.

His career should be an incentive to young men. It is an example of what may be achieved by individual effort without the assistance of a rich father and a college education consisting chiefly of football and cigarettes.

Greensburg evangelism should profit by the fate of Elsie Sigel. But after all that has been said about young women teaching Chinese Sunday School classes, much if not everything depends upon the conduct of the teachers. If the latter are in earnest in their uplift work they are doubtless perfectly safe; but if they are merely hunting something new to flirt with they may be overtaken by retribution

Political honors are being thrust upon Fayette county.

The public will share the indignation of Councilman William McCormick over the destruction or damage to the posies on the public ground.

Camp Hunt isn't hard for anybody to find, judging from the attendance.

The patriotic citizens of Western Pennsylvania honored the memory of Arthur St. Clair on Saturday and Edward Braddock a few days before, yet the memory of Connellsville's greater patriot and greater martyr remains unhonored in the town he founded. Such is the irony of fate.

A tariff is promised in ten days. It has been four months on the way now. Let us hope it will soon limp in from its long journey.

Whitelaw Reid is hobnobbing with royalty, for sure; but that's his business.

Coal dust has been recognized as one of the most common elements of mine danger, hence the instructions of Chief Roderick to the Pennsylvania mine inspectors to compel operators to water it down.

The Connellsville snowfall story was a cold-blooded fake on the part of an impecunious newspaper correspondent.

Uncle John Rockefeller is becoming famous for his epigrams as well as his oil. His latest is a worthy successor to the couplet on the wise old owl. He says: "Who is it that lives longest? It is not he who eats most.' Uncle John thinks the American hog is not yet extinct, and his judgment is good.

The soldier boys got pretty wet before they settled down in the Somerset encampment, but they were quite dry the next morning. Some of them were even thirsty.

Carmichaels has a skeleton, but its discovery in a rubbish heap is not according to rule. It ought to have been found in the closet.

The Baby Rattle tries to cast the shadow of suspicion upon our astronomical abilities. Infantile jealousy is as unreasoning as it is violent.

The coal land market is active, probably in sympathy with the coke market.

A fat Frenchman has made the first successful fly across the British Channel. If a fat Frenchman, why not a fat German? It begins to look as if the Tight Little Island was going to be Opened Up

We are not sure whether we favor the Flying Machines or not We fear they will be great promoters of Free Trade.

The Fayette hotelkeepers are going to take their outing on the water. They want to feel what it is like to be on a real Water Wagon.

Bwana Tumbo prefers to be King of the Jungle rather than Mayor of New York. Perhaps the Macedonian cry from Manhattan does not penetrate the African jungle.

The rains have been a blessing to the lazy man who is charged with watering the lawn and garden.

CHAT WITH OUR CONTEMPORARIES.

The Mayorsdale Commercial doesn't take any stock in the claims that mining companies of that county have mined other people's coal veins. It prefers to hear the testimony before entering judgment. It is the safest plan. It seems incredible that expert miners should make such a gross blunder or that business men should wilfully appropriate coal not belonging to them, especially when such appropriation was morally certain to be discovered sooner or later.

The Elizabeth Herald can't understand why Canadian money should not circulate freely at par in this country. Editor Wiley has just returned from a pleasure trip in the Dominion and has probably found an unexpended Canadian quarter in his jeans.

The Uniontown Standard has discovered what makes money scarce in Uniontown. It learns that J. V. Thompson, executor of the George L Hibbs estate, has recently paid out $10 000,000 on Tygart's valley coal lands. There is consolation in the thought that the money will come back some day with increment. It might also be added that the money came into Uniontown before it went out.

The Charleroi Mail is so enthusiastic over its coming fair that it wants the fair to become a permanent exposition. Better "Try it on the Dog" first.

The Latrobe Bulletin thinks it is time the authorities were concerning themselves about the character of the pictures exhibited in the nickelodeons. The authorities should likewise concern themselves regarding the enforcement of the law regulating aisles and exits.

The Somerset Herald says there is no necessity for Senator Tillman playing a return lecture engagement there, local curiosity being satisfied Local curiosity probably thought Ben carried a Pitchfork around with him

The Scottdale Observor sounds the warning, "Boil the Water!" Cold tea is a good substitute for water in the summer months, but it is peculiar to dry towns.

The McKeesport News has found an enormous leak in the cost of the city's municipal water plant. McKeesport has no monopoly in this discovery

The McKeesport Times renews its suggestion that the Youghiogheny river at that point needs a Galveston sea wall to protect valuable property from the floods. Perhaps canalization will do the work.

The Johnstown Democrat is trying to make a political issue out of Henry C. Frick's underwear The Democratic party is getting actually desperate in its mad quest for campaign material.

The McKeesport News says the French ministry is very Frenchy But it will have to walk Spanish all right.

Town Booming Helps

VI.—How Is Your Front?

A frontless man
Is an "also ran,"
But the man with the front,
He gets there!

The author of this poem is unknown.

He wasn't strong on versification, but he was long on horse sense. He knew that the winners in life are THE ONES THAT PUT UP THE BEST FRONT.

It's just the same with a town. IT MUST HAVE A FRONT. Everybody living in it or doing business in it should boost at all times and in every place.

One of the best ways to boost is to boom your own business by EVERY KIND OF ADVERTISING

THAT IS PROFITABLE. Other people will realize that you are living in a live town and move in.

We are doing what we can to put up a front for our town. Lend a hand, or, better still, let us help you do it.

The right kind of stationery will help your business front and the front of the town.

DON'T BE AN "ALSO RAN" in your business. Don't let your town be classed "among those mentioned." When a new business or the opening of a new factory is under discussion get up to the front.

Arranging and repairing business fronts is our specialty.

HOW IS YOUR FRONT?

The Best Bargain

is reading matter that your money can buy is your local paper. It keeps you posted on the doings of the community.

This Paper

will tell you the things you want to know in an entertaining way; will give you all the news of the community; its every visit will prove a pleasure; it gives more than full value for the price asked for it.

TRAIN RUNS INTO MISSOURI RIVER.

Six Passengers Are Killed and Fifty Injured.

WATER UNDERMINED ROADBED

Although Freight Passes Over Safely a Short Time Previously the Ill-Fated Passenger, Running at Slow Speed, Plunges Into Muddy Waters.

Kansas City, Mo., July 26.—Six lives were lost, three persons were probably fatally injured and some fifty were hurt in the wreck of a Wabash passenger train that plunged into the Missouri river thirty miles east of Kansas City last night.

The dead:
Charles Flowers, engineer.
Louis Bond, fireman.
Harry Eckert, baggageman.
Daniel King, two-year-old son of E. T. King, Eldon, Mo.
Charles Anthony, laborer.
Jesse Oldham, laborer.

The severely injured are: Frank Gardner of Mount Vernon, O.; Mrs. S. S. Hackett and Miss Irene Dorton of Orrick, Mo.

Among the injured who are expected to recover are:

Peter Nan, Cleveland, hand bruised and arm dislocated.

Jacob Steinfeld, Cleveland, severe blow on head.

Of the eight cars in the train five coaches and the locomotive are now in the river with the water covering all of them except one end of a sleeping car. A chair car and two Pullmans remained uninjured.

At the scene of the wreck the river makes a bend and the railroad follows it. For days flood waters have undermined the roadbed, making it too weak to hold up the heavy trains. Three hours before the wreck a freight train of forty-five cars passed the point safely. As the passenger train was running only fourteen miles an hour the compact of the cars was not great. But there was great confusion as the cars slipped and rolled into the murky water.

Eight mail clerks were saved by the fact that the roof of their car was torn off, allowing them to get out on top of the car and swim to the bank. All were injured. In the Des Moines sleeping car E. T. King was holding his little son when the crash came. The child was instantly killed and Mr. King was unconscious when found.

Dr. Turner Lohveck of St. Louis was the heroine of the wreck. In thirty minutes she attended twenty-seven injured persons. Several women passengers assisted her by preparing bandages. "It seemed to me that every woman there tore up her skirts for dressings," said Dr. Lohveck. "Clothing was freely given by the uninjured and many emptied their baggage of wearing apparel."

The locomotive of a local freight train, which was just behind the wrecked passenger train, was attached to the three intact cars of the ill-fated train and all the passengers were hurried back to Kansas City. Thirty-one of the injured are now in a hospital.

FULL OF HUMAN INTEREST.

Landscapes of the Dutch Painters of the Seventeenth Century.

The Dutch painters of the seventeenth century were as little concerned with poetic feeling as with idealism. They used their eyes and painted what they saw, but neither their imaginations nor their feelings were touched. While most modern painters interpret how the scene has affected themselves, the Dutch looked at it as something entirely outside themselves.

Otherwise the Dutch landscapes present us pictures of a pleasant workaday world or of the quiet evenings that follow after the labors of the day—never a hint of disturbance, though war and rumors of war were constant; instead, the perpetual suggestion of prosperous peace and thrifty comfort, for they abound with the evidences of busy humanity. Not only is nature brought into touch with human life by the little figures, so charmingly lifelike, which animate the scene, but everywhere are the results of man's handiwork seen in little things as well as big—in the trimly kept fruit trees of a laborer's garden plot no less than in the handsome facade of a rich burgher's town house. There is no country in the world where the influence of man is so minutely imprinted upon every foot of ground, and as these artists were eager to represent the things they saw no landscapes are so full of human interest as theirs.—Charles H. Caffin in St. Nicholas.

How He Managed.

A man in an up state county owns a number of horses and has a great reputation for skill in the treatment of them. One day a farmer who wanted some valuable information approached the horse owner's little boy and said:

"Look here, my little man, when one of your father's horses is ill what does he do?"

"Do you mean slightly ill or seriously ill?" asked the boy cautiously.

"Oh, seriously ill," said the farmer.

"Because," said the child, "if a horse is only slightly ill he gives it medicine, but if it is seriously ill he sells it."—New York Press.

What Is Happening in Company D At Somerset During Encampment.

By William C. Bishop.

The coffee tasted better on Friday night than it ever did before. It was after 9 o'clock before all the tents were up, and everyone was wet and it was very cold. All the company slept with their overcoats on and many even then complained of the cold. It rained all night and the wind blew a gale.

Chief Buttermore and Sergeant John Ganter failed to put their tent stakes in far enough and about 3 o'clock in the morning they had to get out and erect their tent again.

The band boys will have no trouble with the guards this year. They are first in line with the regiment and located close to the road fence.

A well has been drilled and furnishes water for the Brigade. The well and pump is located in the same field where the 10th Regiment is encamped. The water sent through the pipes has a disagreeable taste and is not being used for drinking purposes, the boys carrying all that is needed for that purpose in buckets.

Fakirs from all over the country are here.

This is the first time that there was no wood for the cooks. The supply that was ordered has been lost as it has not arrived. The rail fences have had to suffer severely.

There is no sickness of any kind reported, not even the customary cases of cramps usually superinduced by green apples and water melons.

Major Dixon, former leader of the Tenth regiment band is here and having a good time. He will have charge of all the bands throughout the encampment, and every member is glad to have him back. Archibauld McColley of Greensburg is drum major for the 10th band now.

The rations are splendid this year and they are plentiful. The State furnishes bread, ham, fresh meat, lard, onions, corn, potatoes, tomatoes, coffee, butter, pickles and condensed milk. Company D is located near a farm house and we have the real article in the latter.

Captain Harry Dunn is worrying over the 10 mile hike that is in prospect for next Friday. The cavalry is not kicking about their hike, because they ride, but the infantry is doing some worrying. All must go just the same.

Sunday was a slow day until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. At that time we had a general review. Thousands of people from all over the State were here to see the spectacle.

The weather Sunday was fine.

There was a big jam at train leaving time Sunday, and every kind of a vehicle was pressed into service. Many old spring wagons were brought in from the country to do service.

Considerable difficulty was experienced in feeding the immense crowds, and the various companies helped out by taking care of many visitors.

Sunday's review was the first one in which some one did not drop out on account of heat.

Chaplain Henry W. Temple held services on Sunday morning and as usual the whole regiment was marched to church. He had a most remarkably large congregation. Some of the boys that don't go at home were compelled to go. The band furnished the orchestra music. Wallace Lowther was choir leader. He is a fine singer.

Concerts are given every night.

The following persons from Connellsville and vicinity were Sunday visitors and took dinner with Company D and the Tenth Regiment band: Mrs. J. W. Buttermore, Mrs. Rockwell Marietta, Mrs. Henry Wilkey, Mrs. C. B. Marietta, Mrs. J. M. Grey, Mrs. Charles Smith, Mrs. Homer Wilson, Mrs. Minnie Murphy, Miss Emma Kate Dull, Mrs. Herbert Baker, Mrs. A. McCnully, Dr. J. B. JUDGE STEEL'S DECISION.

Borough of West Newton Wins Out in Case Against Street Railway.

GREENSBURG, July 26.—Judge John B. Steel handed down a decision Saturday in the case of the borough of West Newton vs. the Pittsburg, McKeesport & Westmoreland Railway Company, restraining the railway from entering upon any street in West Newton under ordinance of May 6, 1907, in which the Council granted the company the right to use a portion of Church or Second street, to run tracks upon.

The company is also ordered to remove from the streets all its poles and materials and to replace the streets in the condition in which they were found by it; and the defendant pay the costs of this proceeding.

The history of this case dates back to November 1, 1906. When they railroad company got its West Newton franchise it agreed to do certain work toward carrying out the purpose of the franchise. This was to be begun within six months and completed within a year. In default of this the borough Council could invalidate the franchise. The decision of the court is that the company did not live up to its obligations and has no rights on the streets of the borough. It is perpetually enjoined to keep off the West Newton streets.

MAN'S ENEMIES.

The Small Foes Are the Most Deadly and Destructive.

In one of Herbert Wells' brilliant stories the terribly scientific and practically invincible Martians who have invaded the earth and conquered England are stopped in the midst of their victories and utterly destroyed by the attacks of microscopic foes. Infinitely small organisms, germs of diseases to which man has become in some degree immune, slay the wonderful warriors of a planet never invaded by these earth foes. What the greatest battleships and the heaviest guns could not do the unseen and unknown living seeds of death accomplish.

More clearly every day the world understands that in the life and affairs of mankind the most deadly and destructive foes are extremely small. All of the fierce mammals and poisonous serpents of Africa do not kill as many human beings in ten years as the tsetse fly slays in one. The tigers and cobras of India kill their thousands every year, but the rats which spread the germs of the bubonic plague destroy their tens of thousands. In this country the common housefly undoubtedly causes more deaths than all the venomous snakes, wild beasts, mad dogs, runaway horses and ill tempered bulls ten times over. The actual proportion is probably much higher than ten to one.—Cleveland Leader.

Keep Your Temper.

Which of all the domestic virtues is most essential to a happy married life? The ability to keep one's temper, beyond all question.

There is nothing which lends more to misery, not only for its possessor, but also for those about him, than an ungovernable and unreasonable temper. No one is worse to live with than an ill tempered man, except perhaps an ill tempered woman.

Bad tempered people completely spoil the lives of those who associate with them. The feeling of strain is ever present. One never knows just when the storm will break, although apparently the weather, metaphorically, is "set fair." Life in these circumstances becomes a burden almost beyond bearing.

Former Pastor of Scottdale United Brethren Church, Will Be Field Secretary for University.

SCOTTDALE, July 27.—Rev. Dr. W. W. Williamson, formerly of Scottdale, but now pastor of the First United Brethren Church, Vine street, Johnstown, has just been informed of his selection as field secretary for Otterbein university, a United Brethren institution at Westerville, O. The announcement was made by the Board of Directors following a recent meeting and was especially pleasing to Rev. Dr. Williamson and his many friends. The position is one of great importance and responsibility, the field of labor covering eight conferences of the church. The territory includes the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia and parts of New York, Maryland and several other commonwealths.

The Rev. Dr. Williamson is a graduate of the Bonebrake Theological Seminary, having left the school in 1885. That fall he was made pastor of the Canton (O.) congregation. During his 10 years' stay in that city his congregation built a handsome house of worship and made great progress both financially and in membership. After leaving Canton he took charge of the First United Brethren Church of Altoona. During his pastorate there that congregation also built a fine church structure, costing over $50,000. He left Altoona some years ago to take charge of the church at Scottdale, where he had been for some time before going to Johnstown. He was made pastor of the First congregation, Johnstown, last fall to succeed Rev. N. W. Eurtner, now of Scottdale, and has since been one of the most influential clergymen on that city.

MAKE THEIR FINAL APPEAL.

Advocates of Protected Hides Will See President Today.

CONFEREES STILL DEADLOCKED

No Predictions Made as to When Conference Report Will Be Made, But Strong Hopes Are That It Will Go To House Tomorrow.

Washington, July 26.—Advocates of protected hides spent all forenoon making a final appeal to President Taft that he stand just as firmly for material reductions in the duties on boots and shoes and other leather goods as he is standing for free hides.

So far as the conferees are concerned they are fighting with locked horns. Until the senate members are assured of sufficient votes to adopt a conference report carrying hides on the free list they will not permit this question to be brought to a vote. The house members have exhibited no signs of weakening and many of them have assumed that it will be impossible to reduce leather goods below the house rates.

It was argued that it is possible to bring in a special rule in the house declaring "in order" rates on leather goods below the duties fixed by the house bill. Without such a rule, it was said, the speaker would be compelled to decide that the conferees had exceeded their authority if they should bring in a report naming rates on leather goods, such as boots and shoes, sole leather, calf skins and harness, lower than those fixed by the house bill. It is not known whether such a rule could be adopted. It was decided that a canvass should be made today to ascertain the house sentiment.

Making No Predictions.

No predictions are made as to when the conference report will be made to the house. Until today it was thought that the report would be ready to present when the house meets on Tuesday. It is not a question of what the conferees are willing to do but what will happen to their report when it is presented. Senator Aldrich will not take the chance of introducing something which might be rejected. Neither will he take the responsibility of attempting to compel the advocates of protected hides to recede from their position without commensurate concessions by leather interests.

President Taft has not ceased in his tariff activities. Although he admitted frankly to several of his callers that the situation was not all that could be desired, the president expressed the hope that the conference tangle would be straightened out and that the report of the conferees would be presented in the house tomorrow. It further is hoped at the White House that the report will be accompanied by a definite plan of action which will be acquiesced in by the house and senate and that congress may adjourn by the last of the week.

President Stands Firm For Free Hides.

President Taft, it was learned, has not receded in any way from his demand for free hides. He is authentically represented as regarding free hides as a typical case underlying the whole principle of downward revision and if free hides should be lost little of encouragement to the real revisionists remains.

President Taft, according to those who have talked most intimately with him, does not suffer the delusion that revision of the tariff downward is going to bring reduced prices or would be of immediate benefit to the much-talked about "ultimate consumer." Instead of a reduction, it is declared that there will be actual increases during the coming year on many of the necessaries of life including wearing apparel.

The president summed up the theory of tariff revision as not so much to bring about immediately lower prices to the consumer, but to protect the consumer from exorbitant prices which might be possible behind a tariff wall maintained at an excessive height.

Payne and Aldrich in Dispute.

Bitter words between Senator Aldrich and Representative Payne just before the close of an hour's session of the tariff conferees last night are reported to have followed an attempt on the part of the former to compel a vote on a motion to make hides dutiable at 7½ per cent, half of the existing rates.

From the variety of reports concerning the incident, none of which can be confirmed unqualifiedly, it appears that the senate leader was angered by frequent statements made by the house leader that the country and the president were in sympathy with the action of the house in putting hides on the free list and that he did not purpose to be governed by what a majority of the conferees thought about the question.

Mr. Aldrich is reported to have upbraided Mr. Payne for his "obstinacy" and to have said that he was "tired of dictatorial methods" to defeat the will of a majority of the conferees. Mr. Payne was unrelenting.

All is not false which at first seems a lie.—Southey.

"KEEP EYE ON BALL."

Great Plan To Follow in the Game of Life, Says John D.

Cleveland, July 26.—"The best investment any of us can make in this world is to set about each day doing something, however small or large, that will cheer the pathway of someone else. This was the life and is today the Gospel of Jesus Christ."

This is what John D. Rockefeller told the Sunday school classes at the Euclid avenue Baptist church. It was the first address Mr. Rockefeller had made in the church since his arrival home a month ago. The talk covered many subjects, including proper eating, golf and cheerfulness.

Turning to the question of eating Mr. Rockefeller asked:

"Who is it lives the longest? Is it he who eats the most?"

"The Bible says that he who obeys his father and mother lives the longest," ventured an old woman in the audience.

"Yes," answered Mr. Rockefeller, "but our parents do not teach us to eat wisely. They often permit us to eat too much."

In closing Mr. Rockefeller told how his golf instructor warned him to "keep his eye on the ball." This, he said, was an excellent plan to follow in the great game of life.

SUICIDE THEORY ATTACKED.

Sutton's Side Will Be Heard This Week.

Annapolis, Md., July 26.—With the opening today of the session of the naval board of inquiry the second week of the investigation into the death of Lieutenant James N. Sutton of Portland, Ore., was begun.

Professor Gilbert P. Colemand of the naval academy and Lieutenant Templin M. Potts, Jr., of the marine corps were put on the stand today. After their testimony "the other side" will present evidence in their efforts to refute the theory of suicide, the testimony of last week tending to show that young Sutton shot himself.

Mrs. Parker will perhaps be the principal witness in this respect. Her testimony is expected to disclose several important points in refutation of the suicide theory, based on the facts obtained by her and her mother in their indefatigable work during the past two years which resulted in the reopening of the case.

"I am not vindictive; all I desire is to clear my brother's name of the disgrace of suicide." So spoke Mrs. Rose Sutton Parker, sister of Lieutenant Sutton.

DEATH PREVENTS SUICIDE.

Stricken After He Had Placed Noose Around Neck.

Philadelphia, July 26.—Death prevented John R. Rodel, aged sixty-seven years, a civil war veteran, from committing suicide. He had climbed on a barrel, tied a noose about his neck and attached the other end of the rope to a spike in the wall when he was stricken by heart disease.

His son found the body on the barrel with the noose hanging loosely about his neck. No marks of strangulation were apparent and the investigation of the coroner's deputy showed death had been from natural causes.

Rodel was a member of the Twenty-fifth Pennsylvania volunteers and for years had suffered from a complication of diseases.

SAVED LOTS OF MONEY

People Were Their Old Clothes to Do It, Says John W. Gates.

New York, July 26.—John W. Gates came back from his six weeks' vacation abroad fairly bubbling over with good spirits.

"Two years ago," said he, "I said that Americans were going to retrench and wear their old clothes. They have done so and the money they saved has surprised them all, as is shown by bank deposits the country wide. Two years' economy in the United States means a world of money and I believe the next four years will witness the greatest industrial development in this country that the world ever seen."

BLERIOT FIRST TO CROSS CHANNEL.

Aviator Flies From France to England in Half an Hour.

TRIP IS MADE IN MONOPLANE

Daring Frenchman Enthusiastically Embraced by His Fellow Countrymen After He Lands on Cliffs Near Dover.

Dover, England, July 26.—This sleepy town experienced the keenest thrill known in a generation when at sunrise a white winged, bird-like machine, with loudly humming motor, swept out from the haze obscuring the sea toward the distant French coast and, circling twice above the high chalky cliffs of Dover, alighted on English soil. A calm Frenchman, Louis Bleroit, descended from the saddle, limping on a bandaged foot, which had been burned on his previous overland flight. Immediately two compatriots, who had been waving a big tri-color flag as a signal for the landing place, fell upon him enthusiastically, embracing him, shouting and pounding him on the back. They, with a few soldiers and others who happened by chance to be on the scene, were the only persons to witness the finish of a most remarkable feat.

Bleriot left Les Baraques, three miles from Calais, on one of the smallest monoplanes ever used. He crossed the channel in a little less than half an hour, twice as swiftly as the fastest mailboat. His speed averaged more than forty-five miles an hour, sometimes it approximated sixty miles. He kept about 250 feet above the sea level and for ten minutes while about mid-channel was out of sight of both coasts and the French torpedo destroyer which followed him, with his wife and friends aboard. The wind was blowing about twenty miles an hour and the sea was choppy.

An Eyewitness' Description.

An eyewitness of the landing thus describes it: "Very early in the morning a wireless message was received from Calais that Bleriot intended to make the flight. It was expected that he would land west of Dover, but from the direction taken it was soon evident that he would alight to the eastward.

"Hastening to the cliff east of the bay I was fortunate enough to arrive just a moment before the airship, which was flying fast, like a gigantic hawk. The craft approached the cliff, growing larger every instant. The noise of the engines was audible in a moment, so swiftly did it come. Bleriot swooped overhead, glancing from right to left and then turned his machine to the east and came to the ground in the meadow. It circled with consummate ease and made the landing gracefully, but even though it touched the land lightly it was slightly damaged."

By his achievement Bleriot won the prize of $5,000 offered by the London Daily Mail for the first flight across the English channel and stole a march on his rivals, Hubert Latham and Count de Lambert, both of whom had hoped to make the attempt today.

Bleriot Is Modest.

Bleriot, who speaks a little English, described his remarkable flight very modestly. "I arose at 3 o'clock," he said, "and went to the aeroplane shed. Finding everything in order on the trial spin I decided to make the flight. I rose in the air and pointed directly to Dover. After ten minutes I was out of sight of land and had left the warship well behind. For a few minutes I could not see either coast, nor any boat.

"The machine dipped toward the water several times. The first objects I saw were ships off the English coast, then I observed Deal and I discovered that the wind, which was southwest, was carrying me thither. I veered to the southward to Dover castle and then saw friends flourishing a flag in a valley suitable for landing. I made two circles while lessening the speed and then dived down, but I came in contact with the ground sooner than I expected. Both the machine and myself were badly shaken."

Welcomed by Dover Officials.

M. Bleriot's friends took him quickly in an automobile to the old Lord Warden hotel by the pier. In the meantime his wife arrived on the destroyer. She embraced him weeping, but they were soon sitting at breakfast, the center of a proud gathering of French people. The mayor and other Dover officials called early and welcomed M. Bleriot in the name of the city and nation as the pioneer of international flight.

The sailors on the ships in the harbor were the first to discover that Bleriot was approaching. They heard the buzzing of the motor two or three minutes before they could discern the aeroplane. Then what looked like a big white butterfly glided over their heads as fast as a train of cars and with almost as much noise. It reached the cliff near the gray turrets of Dover castle, swooped around twice in broad curves and disappeared.

ACTIVITY CONTINUES

Higher Prices Obtain in the Steel and Iron Industry.

New York, July 26.—Activity continues throughout the iron and steel industry. The tendency still is toward higher prices, but there is more or less irregularity and, in some lines keen competition.

The buying movement in pig iron in the eastern territory is gaining momentum with contracts placed last week for foundry and basic iron aggregating 75,000 tons made up of 35,000 basic and 40,000 foundry grades.

Billets have been in active demand and at prices $1 to $2 per ton higher, 11,000 tons open hearth bringing $25 to $26 at the mill. Wagon manufacturers have purchased more soft steel bars while car shops, electrical equipment manufacturers and railroad equipment shops have placed orders for plain structural material and boiler manufacturers, tankmakers, locomotive builders and shipyards have placed additional orders for steel plates. Steel bars have sold mainly at $1.30.

DISLOCATED HER NECK

Woman's Remarkable Fall Seemingly Without Cause.

Lock Haven, Pa., July 26.—A most remarkable accident caused the death of Mrs. Jean Rich Sterner of Philadelphia at Woolrich.

The young woman, who had been driving with her father, M. B Rich, had just alighted from the buggy on the bank of the river and was walking toward the water with intention of getting into a boat when she fell, sustaining a dislocation of the neck, from which death soon resulted. There was no particular unevenness of ground at that point and the fall is most unaccountable, as is the manner in which the injury was sustained.

EVERY WELL A PRODUCER

No Dry Holes Drilled In Cemetery Lots, Say Oil Men.

Steubenville, O., July 26.—Cemetery leases are being sought by oil operators in all parts of this county because they seem to mean good luck. A big producer was struck at Pleasant Hill church in the cemetery lot.

At Mount Calvary Catholic cemetery, west of here, there are nine producers. Union cemetery, at the edge of this city, has several big gushers and others drilling. An old-time operator in the Pennsylvania fields says he never knew a dry hole to be drilled in a cemetery lot.

BONNETS KEPT BOAT AFLOAT

Young Women Used Headgear as Bailers and Saved Their Lives.

South Norwalk, Conn., July 26.—Using their bonnets as bailers when the boat in which they were being driven by a strong wind was filling with water, Miss Marion Weeks and Miss Harriet Lohman of Yonkers managed to keep the craft afloat until rescued.

But for the timely assistance of Captain Andrew Mills the young women probably would have been drowned.

FORTY-TWO INJURED

Passenger Train Derailed Near Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, July 26.—Forty-two persons were injured by the derailing of part of a Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis passenger train at Zionsville, seventeen miles northwest of Indianapolis.

Six passengers were brought to Indianapolis hospitals while the others continued their trips. Among the severely hurt are D. P. Beatty of Akron, O.; H. B. Creel, Cincinnati, and Dr. D. A. Sullivan of Lima, O.

LEFT UNTIL WAR IS OVER

Farmer, Scared by Militia Encampment, Seeks More Peaceful Region.

Nevada, Mo., July 26.—Believing a war in progress at Camp Hadley, where the state militia is holding annual encampment, George Rutherford, a farmer living near the reservation, has left his home.

His family do not know where he is except that he left for Tennessee to wait for the storm clouds to pass.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

A TOAST TO THE PAST.

THE middle of June found the Deppinghams leaving London once more, but this time not on a voyage into the mysterious south seas. They no longer were interested in the island of Japat, except as a reminiscence, nor were they concerned in the vagaries of Taswell Skaggs' will.

The estate was settled—closed!

Two months have passed since the Deppinghams departed from Japat, "for good and all." Many events have come to pass since that memorable day, not the least of which was the exchanging of £500,000, less attorneys' and executors' fees. Lady Deppingham and Robert Browne divided that amount of money and passed into legal history as the "late claimants to the estate of Taswell Skaggs."

It was Sir John Brodney's enterprise. He saw the way out of the difficulty, and he acted as pathfinder to the other and less perceiving counselors, all of whom had looked forward to an endless controversy.

The business of the Japat company and all that it entailed was transferred by agreement to a syndicate.

Never before was there such a stupendous deal in futures.

The grandchildren of the testators were ready to accept the best settlement that could be obtained. Theirs was a rather forlorn hope to begin with. When it was proposed that Agnes Deppingham and Robert Browne should accept £250,000 apiece in lieu of all claims, moral or legal, against the estate, they leaped at the chance.

They had seen but little of each other since landing in England, except as they were thrown together at the conferences. Lady Agnes went in for every diversion imaginable. For a wonder, she dragged Deppingham with her on all occasions. It was a most unexpected transformation. Their friends were puzzled. The rumor went about town that she was in love with her husband.

As for Bobby Browne, he was devotion itself to Drusilla. They sailed for New York within three days after the settlement was effected, ignoring the enticements of a London season. The Brownes were rich. He could now become a fashionable specialist. They were worth nearly a million and a quarter in American dollars. They now had nothing in common with Taswell Skaggs. Skaggs is not a pretty name.

Mr. Britt afterward spent three weeks of incessant travel on the continent and an additional seven days at sea. In Baden-Baden he happened upon Lord and Lady Deppingham. It will be recalled that in Japat they had always professed an unholy aversion for Mr. Britt. Is it cause for wonder, then, that they declined his invitation to dine in Baden-Baden? He even proposed to invite their entire party, which included a few dukes and duchesses who were leisurely on their way to attend the long talked of nuptials in Thorberg at the end of June.

In Vienna the Deppinghams were joined by the Duchess of N., the Marchioness of B. and other fashionables. In a week all of them would be in the castle at Thorberg for the ceremony that now occupied the attention of social and royal Europe.

"And to think," said the duchess, "she might have died happily on that miserable island. I am sure we did all we could to bring it about by steaming away from the place with the plague chasing us. Dear me, how diabolically those wretches lied to the marquis! They said that every one in the chateau was dead, Lady Deppingham, and buried, if I am not mistaken. It would be much better for poor Genevra if she were to be buried instead of married next week," lamented the duchess.

"Other women have married princes and got on very well," said Prince Lichtenstein.

"Oh, come now, prince," put in Lord Deppingham; "you know the sort of chap Brabetz is. There are princes and princes, by Jove."

"He's positively vile!" exclaimed the duchess, who would not mince words.

"She's entering upon a hell of a—I mean a life of hell," exploded the duke banging the table with his fist. "That fellow Brabetz is the rottenest thing in Europe. He's gone from bad to worse so swiftly that public opinion is still months behind him."

"Nice way to talk of the groom," said the host genially. "I quite agree with you, however. I cannot understand the grand duke permitting it to go on unless, of course, it's too late to interfere."

"Poor dear! She'll never know what it is to be loved and cherished," said the marchioness dolefully.

Lord and Lady Deppingham glanced at each other. They were thinking of the man who stood on the dock at Aratat when the King's Own sailed away.

"The grand duke is probably saying the very thing to himself that Brabetz's associates are saying in public," ventured a young Austrian count.

"What is that pray?"

"That the prince won't live more than six months. He's a physical wreck today and a nervous one too. Take my word for it, he will be a creeping, imbecile thing inside of half a year—locomotor ataxia and all that. It's coming positively with a sharp crash."

"I've heard he has tried to kill that woman in Paris half a dozen times," remarked one of the women, taking it as a matter of course that every one knew who she meant by "that woman."

"She was really responsible for the postponement of the wedding in December, I'm told. Of course I don't know that it is true," said the marchioness, wisely qualifying her gossip. "My brother, the grand duke, does not confide in me."

"Well, my heart bleeds for her," said Deppingham.

"She's going into it with her eyes open," said the prince. "It isn't as if she hadn't been told. She could see for herself. She knows there's the other woman in Paris and— Oh, well, why should we make a funeral of it? Let's do our best to be revelers, not mourners. She'll live to fall in love with some other man. They always do. Every woman has to live at least once in her life—if she lives long enough. Come, come! Let us forget the future of the Princess Genevra and drink to her present."

"And to her past, if you don't mind, prince!" amended Lord Deppingham, looking into his wife's somber eyes.

CHAPTER XXXIV

THE TITLE CLEAR.

TWO men and a woman stood in the evening glow looking out over the tranquil sea that crept up and licked the foot of the cliff. It was September. Five months had passed since the King's Own steamed away from the harbor of Aratat. The new dispensation was in full effect. During the long, sickening weeks that preceded the coming of the syndicate Hollingsworth Chase toiled faithfully, resolutely, for the restoration of order and system among the demoralized people of Japat.

With the transfer of the company's business his work was finished. Two young men from Sir John's were now settled in Aratat as legal advisers to the islanders, Chase having declined to serve longer in that capacity.

He was now waiting for the steamer which was to take him to Cape Town on his way to England—and home.

The chateau was closed and in the hands of a small army of caretakers. The three widows of Jacob von Blitz were now married to separate and distinct husbands all of whom retained their places as heads of departments at the chateau, proving that courtship had not been confined to the white people during the closing days of the siege.

The head of the bank was Oscar Archheimer, Mr. Bowles having been deposed because his methods were even more obsolete than his coat of armor.

Selim disposed of his lawful interest in the corporation to Ben Ali the new cadi, and was waiting to accompany his master to America. It may be well to add that the deal did not include the transfer of Neenah. She was not for sale, said Selim to Ben Ali.

It was of Mr. Bowles that the three persons were talking as they stood in the evening glow.

"Yes, Selim," said the tall man in flannels, "he's a sort of old dog Tray, ever faithful, but not the right kind. You don't happen to know anything of old dog Tray, do you? No? I thought not. Nor you, Neenah? Well, he was"—

"Was he the one who was poisoned at the chateau, excellency?" asked Neenah timidly.

"No, my dear," he replied soberly. "If I remember my history, he died in the seventeenth century or thereabouts. It's really of no consequence, however. Any good, faithful dog will serve my purpose. What I want to impress upon you is this—it is most difficult for a faithful old dog to survive a change of masters. It isn't human nature—or dog nature, either. I'm glad that you are convinced, Neenah. But please don't tell Sahib Bowles that he is a dog."

"Oh, no, excellency!" she cried earnestly.

'She is very close mouthed, sahib," added Selim with conviction.

'We'll take Bowles to England with us next week," went on Chase dreamily. "We'll leave Japat to take care of itself."

He lighted a fresh cigarette, tenderly fingering it before applying the match.

"I'll smoke one of hers tonight, Selim. See! I keep them apart from the others in this little gold case. I smoke them only when I am thinking. Now, run in. I want to be alone."

They left him, and he threw himself upon the green sod, his back to a tree, his face toward the distant chateau. Hours afterward the faithful Selim came out to tell him that it was bedtime. He found his master still sitting there looking across the moonlit flat in the direction of a place in the hills where once he had dwelt in marble halls.

"Selim," he said, arising and laying his hand upon his servant's shoulder, his voice unsteady with finality, "I have decided after all to go to Paris. We will live there, Selim. Do you understand?" with strange fierceness a great exultation mastering him. "We are to live in Paris!"

To himself all that night he was saying, "I must see her again! I shall see her!"

A thousand times he had read and reread the letter that Lady Deppingham had written to him just before the ceremony in the cathedral at Thorberg. He knew every word that it contained. He could read it in the dark. She had said that Genevra was going into a hell that no hereafter could surpass in horrors. And that was ages ago, it seemed to him. Genevra had been a wife for nearly three months—the wife of a man she loathed. She was calling in her heart for him to come to her. She was suffering in that unspeakable hell. All this he had come to feel and shudder over in his unspeakable loneliness.

He would go to her. There could be no wrong in loving her in being near her, in standing by her in these hours of desperation.

A copy of a London newspaper stuffed away in the recesses of his trunk, dated June 29, had come to him by post. It contained the telegraphic details of the brilliant wedding in Thorberg. Every royal family in Europe was represented. The list of noble names seemed endless to him, the flower of the world's aristocracy. How he hated them!

The next morning Selim aroused him from his fitful sleep bringing the news that a strange vessel had arrived off Aratat. Chase rushed out upon his veranda overlooking the little harbor.

A long, white, graceful craft was lying in the harbor. He stared long and intently at the trim craft.

"Can I be dreaming?" he muttered, passing his hand over his eyes. "Don't lie to me, Selim! Is it really there? Then he uttered a loud cry of joy and started off down the slope with the speed of a race horse, shouting in the frenzy of an uncontrollable glee.

It was the Marquis of B.'s white and blue yacht.

* * * * * * * *

Three weeks later Hollingsworth Chase stepped from the deck of the yacht to the pier in Marseilles. The next day he was in Paris attended by the bewildered and almost useless Selim. An old and valued friend, a campaigner of the wartime days, met him at the Gare de Lyon in response to a telegram.

"I'll tell you the whole story of Japat, Arch, but not until tomorrow," Chase said to him as they drove toward the Ritz. "I arrived yesterday on the Marquis of B.'s yacht, the Cricket. Do you know him? Of course you do. Everybody does. The Cricket was cruising down my way and picked me up—Bowles and me. The captain came a bit out of his way to call at Aratat, but he had orders of some sort from the marquis by cable, I fancy, to stop off for me."

He did not regard it as necessary to tell his correspondent friend that the Cricket had sailed from Marseilles with but one port in view—Aratat. He did not tell him that the Cricket had come with a message to him and that he was answering it in person as it was intended that he should—a message written six weeks before his arrival in France. There were many things that Chase did not explain to Archibald James.

"You're looking fine, Chase, old man. Did you a lot of good out there. You are as brown as that Arab in the taximeter back there. By Jove, old man, that Persian girl is ripping. You say she's his wife? She's"— Chase broke in upon this far from original estimate of the picturesque Neenah.

"I say, Arch, there's something I want to know before I go to the marquis this evening. I'm due there with my thanks. He lives in the Boulevard St. Germain—I've got the number all right. Is one likely to find the house full of swells? I'm a bit of a savage just now, and I'm correspondingly timid."

His friend stared at him for a moment.

"I can save you the trouble of going to the marquis," he said. "He and the marchioness are in London at present. Left Paris a month ago."

"What? The house is closed? In deep anxiety.

"I think not. Servants are all there, I dare say. Their place adjoins the Brabetz palace. The princess is his niece, you know."

'You say the Brabetz palace is next door?" demanded Chase steadying his voice with an effort.

"Yes—the old Fleurebert mansion. The princess was to have been the social sensation of Paris this year. She's a wonderful beauty, you know."

"Was to have been?'

"She married that rotten Brabetz last June, but of course you never heard of it out there in what's-the-name-of-the-place. You may have heard of his murder however. His mistress shot him in Brussels—"

"Great God, man!" gasped Chase, clutching his arm in a grip of iron.

"The devil, Chase!" cried the other, amazed. "What's the matter?

"He's dead? Murdered? How—when? Tell me about it!" cried Chase, his agitation so great that James looked at him in wonder.

"Gad, you seem to be interested!"

"I am. Where is she—I mean the princess and the other woman?'

"Cool off, old man. People are staring at you. Brabetz was shot three weeks ago at a hotel in Brussels. He'd been living there for two months more or less, with the woman. In fact he left Paris almost immediately after he was married to the Princess Genevra. The gossip is that she wouldn't live with him. She'd found out what sort of a dog he was. They didn't have a honeymoon, and they didn't attempt a bridal tour. Somehow they kept the scandal out of the papers. Well, he hiked out of Paris at the end of a week, just before the 14th. The police had asked the woman to leave town. He followed. Dope fiend, they say. The bride went into seclusion at once. She's never to be seen anywhere. The woman shot him through the head and then took a fine dose of poison. It was a ripping news story. The prominence of the—"

'This was a month ago?" demanded Chase trying to fix something in his mind. "Then it was after the yacht left Marseilles with orders to pick me up at Aratat."

"What are you talking about? Sure it was. If the yacht left Marseilles six weeks ago. What's that got to do with it?

Nothing. Don't mind me, Arch. I'm a bit upset."

"There was talk of a divorce almost before the wedding bells ceased ringing. The grand duke got his eyes opened when it was too late. He repented of the marriage. The princess was obliged to live in Paris for a certain length of time before applying to the courts for freedom. Gad, I'll stake my head she's happy these days'

Chase was silent for a long time. He was quite cool and composed when at last he turned to his friend.

Arch, do me a great favor. Look out for Selim and Neenah. Take 'em to the hotel and see that they get settled. I'll join you this evening. Don't ask questions, but put me down here. I'll take another cab. There's a good fellow. I'll explain soon. I'm—I'm going somewhere, and I'm in a hurry.'

* * * * * * * *

The voiture drew up before the historic old palace in the Boulevard St. Germain. Chase's heart was beating furiously as he stepped to the curb. The coacher leaned forward for instructions. His face hesitated for a moment, swayed by a momentary indecision.

"I want you for my husband, dearest"

Attendre" he said finally. The driver adjusted his register and settled back to wait. Then Chase mounted the steps and lifted the knocker with trembling fingers. He was dizzy with eagerness, cold with uncertainty.

She had asked him to come to her but conditions were not the same as when she sent the compelling message. There had come into her life a vital break, a change that altered everything. What was it to mean to him?

He stood a moment later in the salon of the old Fleurebert palace vaguely conscious that the room was darkened by the drawn blinds and that it was cool and sweet to his senses. He knew that she was coming down the broad hallway. He could hear the rustle of her gown.

Inconsequently he was wondering whether she would be dressed in black. Then, to his humiliation, he remembered that he was wearing uncouth, travel soiled garments.

She was dressed in white—a house gown simple and alluring. There was no suggestion of the coronet, no shadow of grief in her manner, as she came swiftly toward him, her hands extended, a glad light in her eyes.

The tall man, voiceless with emotion, clasped her hands in his and looked down into the smiling, rapturous face.

"You came'" she said, almost in a whisper.

"Yes. I could not have stayed away. I have just heard that you—you are free. You must not expect me to offer condolences. It would be sheer hypocrisy. I am glad—I am glad! You sent for me—you sent the yacht, Genevra, before—before you were free. I came knowing that you belonged to another. I find you the same as when I knew you first—when I held you in my arms and heard you say that you loved me. You do not grieve—you do not mourn. You are the same my Genevra—the same that I have dreamed of and suffered for all these months. Something tells me that you have descended to my plane. I will not kiss you, Genevra, until you have promised to become my wife."

She had not taken her eyes from his white, intense face during this long summing up.

"Hollingsworth, I cannot, I will not blame you for thinking ill of me," she said. "Have I fallen in your eyes? I wanted you to be near me. I wanted you to know that when the courts freed me from that man I would be ready and happy to come to you as your wife. I am not in mourning today, you see. I knew you were coming. As God is my witness I have no husband to mourn for. He was nothing to me. I want you for my husband dearest. It was what I meant when I sent out there for you—that and nothing else."

[THE END]

From Bad to Worse

A gentleman was admiring his pigeons the other afternoon when he heard a curious "thud" and saw one of his birds drop from a window sill to the ground.

Turning round the gentleman was just in time to see a small boy in the lane drop a catapult and run.

After a short chase the culprit was caught.

'You young scoundrel," ejaculated the angry owner of the pigeon. "What do you mean by coming and shooting my birds?"

'Please, sir, I didn't mean to do it," whined the captive. "I—I didn't shoot at the pigeon."

"Come come," said the gentleman, "don't make matters worse. I saw the bird fall and if you did not aim at it how came you to hit it?

'Please, sir,' blubbered the boy, "the pigeon got in the way. I—I was aiming at the winder.'—London Tit Bits.

The Dead Larks

In Baluchistan even the wolves go mad. In his book, The Frontiers of Baluchistan," G. P. Tate writes. The shepherds give a strange reason for the epidemic of rabies. According to them it was caused by the wild beasts eating dead larks. In some years they said the larks develop extraordinary vitality and pour forth such a flood of songs as they rise on the wing that they become suffocated and fall to the ground dead. A wild animal which eats one of these dead birds invariably develops rabies. This is a widespread superstition and seems not unfamiliar to the natives of India who were with me."

A Butchers' Common

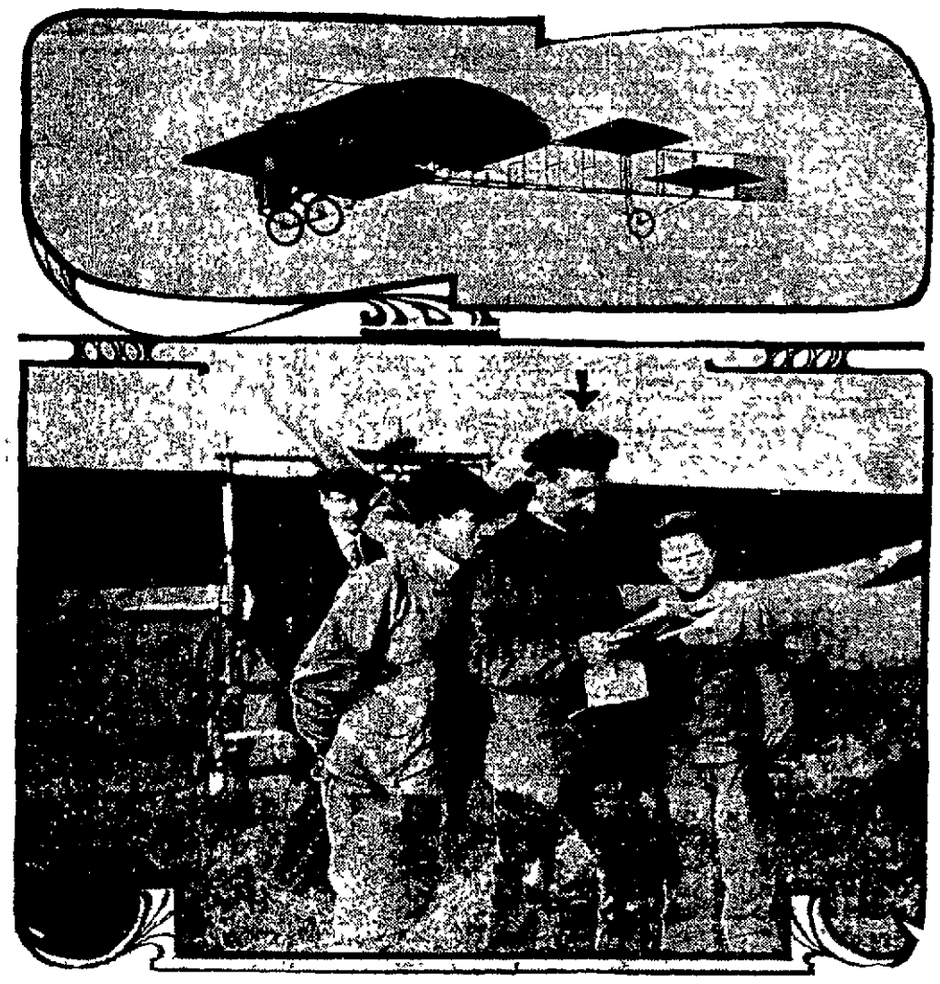
William, earl of Warren, in the time of King John, while standing upon the castle walls saw two bulls fighting in the castle meadow till all the butcher dogs pursued one of the maddened bulls quite through the town. The sight pleased the earl so much that he gave the castle meadows, where the duel of the bulls began, for a common to the butchers of the town after the first grass was mowed, on condition that they should find a mad bull the day six weeks before Christmas day for the continuance of that sport forever.—London Standard.

Fine Crops

"Do you raise anything worth while in your garden?" said the visitor from the city.

"I should say so" answered Mr. Crosslots. "It's the best place for fishing worms in the entire village."—Washington Star.

BLERIOT, WHO OUTDONE LATHAM IN DARING ENGLISH CHANNEL FLIGHT



The keenest rivalry existed between M. Bleriot who successfully crossed the channel in half an hour Sunday and Hubert Latham from the time they completed their flying machines and each afterward turned attention to the English channel the feat of crossing which has been the ambition of daring swimmers and aeronauts of all times. Latham knew that Bleriot and possibly the Count de Lambert would start in order make the attempt and he stole a march on them starting from Calais Friday on July 13 and making a remarkable flight of ten miles before the steering gear of his machine became fouled and he fell into the water. Both Latham nor the monoplane was injured. The aviator was sitting in his machine calmly smoking a cigarette when he was picked up by a passing ship. Bleriot then announced that he would try to cross the treacherous strip of water and hurried to Calais hoping to make the flight before Latham or Lambert could be ready. Latham however arrived there a few hours later and there was splitted betting on both sides of the channel as to which would start first and which would come nearest to a successful flight. Bleriot's machine is the smallest practical flying machine ever built. It is of the same type as Latham's and is propelled by a tiny but powerful motor. The driver's seat is behind the wings and the machine has a speed of forty miles an hour.

HOW TO WIN.

Determination and Unity of Purpose Will Work Wonders

Once you have chosen your occupation or profession hold fast thereto. Let nothing allure you from the main traveled road. Having chosen hold like steel. Make everything feed into the main current of your life. Even modest talents organized and unified have conquered great distinction and worldwide success. History is full of illustrations of the unifying power of a great purpose. Witness the poor child Hastings looking at a distant manor house that once had belonged to his father. The determination to win back that estate before he died lent power and momentum and produced Lord Hastings. Witness the influence of purpose upon that little Scotch boy out upon a holiday on the banks of the Clyde with three precious coppers as his entire possession. He determined to build a house on the hilltop overlooking the river and forty years later moved into the castle from which he looked down upon twenty ocean steamers he had built. Witness the purpose of William the Silent, filling all the days and nights for the hero struggling to deliver brave little Holland from Spain. Witness Milton's vow to write a poem that the world would not willingly let die and who therefore lived an epic life. Witness Paul's resolution to do one thing and one thing alone and who, with that unit purpose achieved democracy for all subsequent peoples and centuries. Aimlessness will make your life like a sand heap.—Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis.

Her Home

Some years ago when a part of the Japanese imperial palace was burned at Tokyo the empress was forced to flee to one of the old daimio houses near by. It was not at all comfortable, and as the story goes, her majesty, appreciating that her subjects would be much concerned at her living in such a mean place, sat down and wrote them a little poem in which she denied that she had changed her residence. The poem which was in the best Japanese language stated that her majesty's home had always been in the hearts of the people and that neither the flames nor the cold could ever drive her from that dear abode.

More Accurate

The pastor and his wife had called upon a member of the congregation, a widow with a small but exceedingly lively boy and were on their way home. Well said the preacher, she seems to be a very intelligent woman anyhow.

"Yes.'

'And very positive in expressing her opinions.'

On the contrary,' said his wife "she struck me as being strongly negative."

Negative? How?

Everything she said to her little boy began with a 'Don't, Johnny!'"—Exchange.

Continues to Work Wonders in Connellsville

BUT THIS WEEK WILL BE THE LAST OF DEMONSTRATION

It is absurd to doubt the great merits of Root Juice as proofs of its wonderful health promoting merits can be found in scores of homes here in Connellsville and vicinity. It has undoubtedly proved to be the world's greatest healing tonic to the stomach, bowels bladder liver and kidneys. No weak sickly man or woman can afford to wait another day without getting some of the great medicine as a few doses usually create marked improvement and from the experience of many local people the soothing healing and strengthening action of the remedy is so rapid that it is absolutely wonderful. Dozens of people have so reported at Graham & Company's drug store within the last few days. We are informed that the demonstrations will positively close at this point next Saturday night and until the close of the demonstrations the Juice will be sold for one dollar a bottle or three bottles for two dollars and a half.

SEA MONSTERS OF OLD.

The Marine Monster That Was Thought to Cause Tidal Waves

The kraken was one of the sea monsters of old, and if all the stories told about its wondrous size and doings are true it overshadowed the serpent as much as the latter does the common garter snake. An old writer says that this marine giant caused tidal waves by swallowing a goodly part of the waters of the ocean and then belching them out again. He also makes mention of the fact that its gigantic horny beak was often mistaken for mountain peaks suddenly shoved into sight by the internal convulsions of the earth.

Bishop Pontoppidan a truthful member of the Copenhagen Royal academy, is much more conservative in his estimates of its size giving it as his opinion that they were seldom found more than the half of an Italian mile in length and not larger in diameter than the cathedral at The Hague.'

He also says that its body was frequently mistaken by sailors for an island, 'so that people landed upon it and were engulfed in a maelstrom of water when the creature sank to its hidden ocean den.' Other authorities testify that its beak from the eyes to the point 'was longer than the mainmast of a man-of-war."

The Cokers wound up the second southern trip of the second season by losing to Grafton at Clarksburg yesterday but they won Saturday and come home with a record of five victories and three defeats on the road; which is something to crow over. The team played good ball all the time and made the other fellows go the limit in the games they lost. Yesterday's contest was a whitewash, Jones being a puzzle while Johnny Yoedt was hit just hard enough for the Engineers to tally four times

The Cokers made a better showing on the road than did Uniontown. The Champions lost three out of four to Grafton, while the Cokers reversed this situation. True, the Cokers only got an even break with Uniontown, while Uniontown took three out of the four games, but Grafton has the better team of the two West Virginia aggregations.

The battle royal comes this week and while the Cokers overcome Uniontown's lead and regained first place during the week the team which comes out best in the coming series will be the team most likely to meet Fairmont to determine the championship title

Saturday's Game.

For the first time this season Tom Silcox was hit real hard in a nine inning game and Grafton turned the trick. The Engineers battered Tom for 12 hits, but could get only three runs. Fitzwater was touched up for 13 bingles by the Cokers, which netted six runs and the game.

Myers and Hagan were the star sluggers. Dutch getting two doubles and a single, while Hagan drove out three singles. Fralley's only bingle was for two sacks. Ike Francis and Calhoun got a pair of singles. Morgan and Gilligan being the only Cokers who failed to hit safely. Calhoun started by getting three pilfered cushions while Hagan swiped one Hagan scored three times, Ike Francis twice and Myers once

Both teams had plenty of men left on the sacks, 11 Cokers and 14 Engineers dying on the pillows. Silcox was wild to the extent of giving five free tickets to first but he was accorded good support and refused to ascend when the situation looked bad The score:

Sunday's Game.

Grafton got to Johnny Yoedt for 10 hits yesterday but at that they would not have won if the Cokers had been hitting. All the Connellsville sluggers could do was get four bingles off Jones. Morgan, Hagan Dunn and Chip Francis being the lucky swatters Chip batted for Johnny Yoedt in the ninth inning

The hitting of Zinn was a feature of the game. Zinn got three bingles, facing one of them for the circuit This is the first game on the trip that the Cokers failed to hit consistently The team returns ready to meet Uniontown this afternoon and reduced the enlarged cranium of the Uniontown fans. Elmer Cannon will probably pitch.

Most of the trouble for Yoedt yesterday came in the seventh inning when, with two men on, Zinn lifted the ball over the fence. The game was played at Clarksburg. The score:

Three out of five is O K
Grafton's team has some sluggers.
Calhoun swiped three bases Saturday.
Cokers are hitting the ball out of sight.
Wonder if Roberts will hold the Cokers to no hits?
Gronninger would not allow Cokers a game from Clarksburg.
No danger of the Cokers getting anything from anybody in this league.
Sweeney may get some new twirlers this week. Need one more at least.
Hot race for hitting honors between Hagan, Ike Francis, Myers and Calhoun
Roberts held Fairmont to no hits in seven innings. Nice twirling that

LABOR PARTY PROTESTS

Huge Demonstration Against Proposed Visit of Czar to England.

London, July 26.—A huge demonstration by the organized labor party was held in Trafalgar square to protest against the visit of the Emperor of Russia to England Various woman's political leagues and socialistic and other organizations were represented, while numerous banners, which headed the different processions, were inscribed with the uncomplimentary mottos, such as "Let the hanging czar remember," "Shall we grasp his bloody hand?"

James Keir Hardie, the Socialist member of parliament, James Ramsay MacDonald, the Labor and Socialist member, and George Bernard Shaw made speeches, voicing angry protests against the proposed visit.
